BBB Accredited since January 1970

Hurst Office Suppliers President Dick Hurst is proud that Hurst Office Suppliers has been in business since 1923, when his father began the business. It continues to be a family affair, with daughter Hope Hurst Lanham working at the business as Accounting Director. Hope says that in a tough economy, it's even more worthwhile and valuable to be a BBB Accredited Business. "People are more careful with their money than ever and want to spend it with a reputable company," Hope says. "Because BBB Accreditation is by invitation only, that means that a business which is BBB Accredited has met ethical standards, and is meeting these standards every day. That puts businesses like ours among businesses customers will turn to first because they know they can trust them."

Hope says there seems to be more a focus these days on doing business with local companies, and BBB Accreditation helps their business stand out even more. "Dealing with a smaller local business with a more personal approach means even more when your customers know you do business in an ethical manner, and back up that commitment by becoming BBB Accredited," she says.

"We appreciate all the information the BBB puts out to help our business, and our customers, avoid scams," says Dick. "Knowing that the dispute resolution program is available to us is valuable, too."

Hope says that Hurst Office Suppliers uses other BBB Accredited Businesses whenever they can. "It means a business wants to things right and keep its promises. Having BBB Accredited Businesses available to provide what I need as a business and as a consumer is extra assurance for me. It's peace of mind in business decisions."
